OVERVIEW

Le Château de Canisy is an exceptional historic monument, surrounded by a 300-hectare estate of parkland, ponds and woods handed down without alienation from generation to generation for 1,000 years. Since the Middle Ages, the chateau has remained in the same family, offering both diversity and historical continuity: medieval towers, Renaissance wings, a romantic park in the English style, but including French perspectives according to the plans of Achille Duchêne.

Classified as "one of the 7 wonders of La Manche", it comprises two main wings built in the 13th and 16th centuries, with 70 rooms including 18 suites. Each suite is unique and named after an ancestor or close family member. They all have been fully decorated and refurbished, most in the luminous, elegant style of the 18th century, with period beds and luxurious marble bathrooms, some with copper bathtubs. Silks, linens and wallpapers based on 18th-century designs have been carefully chosen to respect the authentic, historic character of the premises.

The Château's owners, the Count and Countess de Kergorlay and their children Marie Victoire and Henry-Louis, are descendants of William the Conqueror's companions; their families include famous figures whose names have been given to several suites in the château, including Empress Josephine, Napoleon's first wife and a close cousin of the Comtesse's family. One of the Kergorlays' ancestors was the son-in-law of the famous Charles Carroll de Carrollton, who signed the United States Declaration of Independence.
